This map illustrates the National Highway System (NHS) in Knoxville, Tennessee. The map features a network of roads color-coded by their status: blue for the Eisenhower Interstate System, red for other NHS routes, green for non-interstate STRAHNET routes, and brown for major STRAHNET connectors. Other roads not on the NHS are shown in grey, and railroad lines are marked with cross-ticks. The map also highlights various land use areas: yellow for census urbanized areas, purple for Indian reservations, olive green for Department of Defense land, light green for national forests, and dark green for National Park Service land. Water bodies are shown in light blue. Key locations and landmarks are labeled, including Knoxville, Oak Ridge, Lenoir City, Alcoa, Maryville, and the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. Major highways are identified by their route numbers (e.g., 61, 62, 95, 162, 129, 158, 66, 411, 75, 40, 640, 275, 321). The map includes a legend, a scale bar in miles and kilometers, and a north arrow.
